PREFACE.

THE Doetsch Collection is the creation of the last twenty years. In this comparatively short time, the energy of its deceased owner succeeded in collecting and exhibiting in his house in London a rich collection of pictures, for the most part of great interest and importance. He aimed especially at the acquisition of works belonging to the best period of the various Schools of Italy and the Netherlands, without, however, neglecting the German and Spanish Schools. Most richly represented are the Schools of Florence and Venice. They form the bulk of the Italian collection, the variety of which affords an admirable picture of the different directions in which Italian art accomplished its development.

It would be difficult to name a second collection of Italian pictures of any extent, in which, compared to portraits of historical interest, the Madonnas and Saints fall so markedly into the background as is the case here. Those princes, of world-wide celebrity on account of the splendour of their courts and their relations to the first painters of the Renaissance, whose names are familiar to every one, meet us here in numerous portraits, as to which it can be asserted on good grounds that they were executed under their orders by the painters in their service. The collection is peculiarly rich in portraits of the Medici family and of the Royal House of Spain; and among the likenesses of princes, we may call special attention to the portrait of King Henry VII., as unique and remarkable from more than one point of view.

No trouble has been spared that, by comparison and in other ways, might contribute to the highest possible degree of certainty in the descriptions and attributions.

Among the pictures of the German and Flemish Schools there are some that, apart from their value as works of art, have a special archæological and historical interest; and in all such cases explanatory notes have been added to the descriptions in the catalogue.

It is hardly necessary to point out that the Dutch School is also brilliantly represented by a large number of capital works—chiefly of small size—by the most famous masters, among whom Franz Hals and his School may be mentioned in the first place; while at the same time there are specimens of masters scarcely to be met with elsewhere, even in the choicest and most famous collections of Dutch art.

It could not fail to happen that, in his extraordinary zeal as a collector, and dominated as he was by the determination to see himself surrounded by works of the greatest masters, the founder and owner of this gallery occasionally procured pictures, the attributions of which failed to satisfy the demands of a scrupulous and ruthless scientific criticism. Influenced, therefore, by these considerations, the executors of the late Mr. Doetsch have seen fit to entrust me with the task of submitting every single picture in the collection to a process of critical investigation, and at the same time, with regard to the attributions, they have given me full power to alter them in all cases in which a more accurate determination might seem necessary. However, there is no need to lay stress upon the assurance that in the great majority of cases these altered titles in no way depreciate the value of the Collection as such, least of all in the eyes of connoisseurs, or of those collectors whose great object it is to possess pictures which owe their names to something more consistent than chance and more solid than fancy.

From the fact that the Collection was always accessible to lovers of art and to art critics, it follows that not a few of its rare and important works have long since met with their just appreciation in critical and historical publications, such, for instance, as

B. Berenson's 'Venetian Painters,' the official catalogue of the Rijks Museum at Amsterdam, Ch. Yriarte's 'Autour des Borgia,' Dr. Bode's articles in the Jahrbuch der Kgl. Preussischen Kunstsammlungen, and others.

Of a number of pictures it can be proved that they come from the best and most renowned collections, like the Orléans Gallery and the Collection of Charles I. For, with regard to the acquisition of pictures, not only was it of importance to Mr. Doetsch that they should fully make good their claims in the matter of preservation and authenticity, but he also laid special stress upon the securities involved in their provenance and pedigree. He acquired pictures from the Collections of the Marquis of Exeter, the Marquess of Donegal, the Marquis of Hastings, and the Duke of Roxburghe; from the Markham Collection, from the Pinacoteca Lochis, and through the intermediation of Dr. G. Frizzoni in Milan. In fact there is no doubt that the majority of the pictures forming the Doetsch Collection passed from English country seats directly into the owner's hands, and to this circumstance we are also partly indebted for the fact that many of the pictures are still provided with costly frames, such as only the craft of former centuries could design and execute.

J. P. RICHTER, PH. DR.

N.B.—Pictures marked ☒ have been photographed separately, mostly on a large scale. The negative plates may be acquired by buyers of the corresponding pictures through MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS.

PICTURES BY ITALIAN MASTERS.

SCHOOL OF FERRARA.

LORENZO COSTA (1460-1535).

- 1 PILATE, in consultation with the Jewish High Priests, surrounded by Roman soldiers

A composition of fifteen figures. This is perhaps a unique representation of the subject in Italian art.

Panel—17 in. by 20 in.

MAZZOLINO, OF FERRARA (1431-1530).

- 2 VIRGIN AND CHILD, with a landscape in the background. Type (12)
and attitude of the Virgin show the influence of Garofalo

An early work of the Master

GAROFALO (1481-1559).

- 3 THE VIRGIN AND CHILD, with St. Elizabeth and St. John, in a landscape

Panel— $12\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $12\frac{1}{4}$ in.

From the Collection of the Duke of Roxburghe

GAROFALO (1481-1559).

- 4 VIRGIN AND CHILD, with St. Elizabeth and St. John, and a lamb; in the background a high wall and a landscape view

Panel (oval top)— $15\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 11 in.

DOSSO DOSSI (ASCRIBED TO).

- 5 PORTRAIT OF AN ITALIAN NOBLEMAN. A half-length figure, turned to the right and leaning against a table

Canvas— $40\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 31 in.

BATTISTA DOSSO, ASCRIBED TO (ABOUT 1520).

- 6 PORTRAIT OF A GENERAL, in armour. A half-length figure, turned to the left, his right hand resting on the helmet

Canvas— $46\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 38 in.

IPPOLITO SCARSELLA (1551-1621).

- 7 PORTRAIT OF A PRINCE. A three-quarter length figure, life size, in rich armour, his helmet on a table and the left hand resting on it, the right hand at his side

This seems to be a portrait of Hercules II, Duke of Ferrara (1534-1558), the son of Alphonso I.

The picture has also been ascribed to Paolo Veronese.

Canvas— $49\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $36\frac{1}{4}$ in. ✕

SCHOOL OF PARMA.

FILIPPO MAZZUOLA (ABOUT 1500).

- 8 VIRGIN AND CHILD. The Virgin, a half-length figure, is standing behind a parapet

This artist's works are extremely scarce. He was the founder of the School of Parma, and the father of Francesco "Il Parmegiano," whose scheme of colouring is foreshadowed in the present picture, the composition of which renders it probable that he studied art in Venice.

PARMIGIANO (1503-1540).

- 14 PORTRAIT OF MALATESTA BAGLIONE. A similar picture is in the Imperial Museum at Vienna. There the head is covered by a cap instead of the crown, and the accessories on the right, the table with the sceptre, the inkstand, the paper, and the harp in the background are missing. In the present picture the composition also appears to be an improvement on the former. A three-quarter length figure, life size

15 VIRGIN AND CHILD, with the Infant St. John

The artist is best known by his fresco paintings at Fontainebleau. Colouring and drawing betray the influence of Parmigianino, whom he is known to have followed. The landscape background is entirely in the manner of the latter artist.

Girolamo Bedolo, called Mazzuoli, was a cousin of Parmigianino.

17 VIRGIN AND CHILD, between St. Laurence and a pope

Panel—31 in. by 24 in.

Painted under the influence of the School of Ferrara

GIACOMO FRANCIA (1484-1557).

18 VIRGIN AND CHILD. On the right is the Infant Christ, lying on the ground in front of a hedge of roses; the Virgin, who is standing on the left, is about to kneel down

Similar pictures are in the Galleries of Munich and Verona. In these pictures the figures are nearly life size. The one at Munich, which is by Francesco Francia, is signed "Francia Aurifex."

Panel—14 in. by 11 in.

GIULIO FRANCIA (1487-1540).

- 19 VIRGIN AND CHILD, and St. Catherine. The child is standing on a parapet, behind which the two other figures appear as busts

Panel—15 in. by 12½ in.

By the hand of Giulio, the younger son and pupil of Francesco Francia

ANIBALE CARRACCI (1560-1609).

- 20 PORTRAIT OF A GENTLEMAN. A bust, turned to the left, with full beard, wearing a black coat

Canvas—22¼ in. by 18¼ in.

DOMENICHINO (1581-1641).

- 21 HEAD OF ST. CECILIA. A bust, with the face turned upwards; on the left is the organ, the emblem of the saint

Raphael has painted the same head in a well-known altar piece, now at Bologna.

Panel—13¼ in. by 10¼ in.

DOMENICHINO (1581-1641).

- 22 MARY MAGDALEN. A bust, with the face turned up

Canvas—16½ in. by 12½ in.

GUIDO RENI (1575-1642).

- 23 MARY MAGDALEN, and two angel boys. The saint, a three-quarter length figure, life size, is leaning against a rock and looking up

GIULIO CESARE PROCACCINO (1560–1625).

- 26 VIRGIN AND CHILD. The Virgin, a half-length figure, seated and turned to the left, recalls similar figures by Solario. She holds the Infant Christ in her lap

Panel—15 in. by 11½ in.

The back of the panel is covered by an Italian coat-of-arms, above which is the Imperial eagle

GIULIO CESARE PROCACCINO.

- 27 ANGELS PLAYING MUSIC. They are seated on clouds, in a circle, round the gilt centre; two groups at the sides; blue sky with golden stars in the background. The panel was originally used as the cover of a virginal

V. CARPACCIO (1470-1519).

30 VIRGIN AND CHILD

The motive of the Virgin adoring the sleeping Child, who is resting on a parapet, is often met with in pictures by great masters of the early Venetian School. It first occurs in pictures by Bartolomeo and Alvise Vivarini, by Giovanni Bellini, and by Crivelli. We find the same here repeated.

Signed VITORE SCARPACCIA

It is to be noted that Vasari spells the artist's name as it is inscribed on the picture.

Panel—23 in. by 17½ in. ✠

MARCO BASAITI (ABOUT 1510).

- 31 VIRGIN AND CHILD ENTHRONED. A landscape in the background

Panel—16 in. by 11¾ in.

JACOPO DE' BARBARJ (ABOUT 1450-1515).

32 VIRGIN AND CHILD

The composition corresponds with Dürer's engraving, known as "La Vierge au singe" (B. vii. 60, 42), and the painting successfully imitates the effect of the engraving, the paper being rendered as being sealed on a board, on which there is, besides, a facsimile imitation of a leaf of a German almanac and a fly.

Panel— $14\frac{3}{4}$ in. by $11\frac{5}{8}$ in. ✠

BARTOLOMEO VENETO.

33 PORTRAIT OF A LADY, as St. Cecilia. She is standing behind a parapet on which is a music book, and is playing a lute

Canvas— $26\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $20\frac{1}{2}$ in.

Painted between 1505 and 1530

A similar picture is in the Gallery of the Ambrosian Library at Milan

BARTOLOMEO VENETO.

H. Hensel

34 PORTRAIT OF A YOUNG MAN. A bust, turned to the left; before it a parapet with a cardellino on it

Dr. G. Frizzoni and Mr. Berenson have ascribed this very luminous picture to Jacopo de' Barbarj. The style of painting certainly recalls in some degree the beautiful portrait by him in the Imperial Museum at Vienna.

PALMA VECCHIO (1480-1528).

- 35 PORTRAIT OF A VENETIAN GENTLEMAN. A bust, turned to the right

Painted in the artist's latest style—he died in 1528—and recalling the heads of donors in some of his “sacre conversazioni.”

Several of Palma Vecchio's pictures have been finished after his death by Cariani. The peculiar brown tone of colouring in the flesh tints of this picture makes it probable that it belongs to the same class.

LORENZO LOTTO (1480-1554).

- 37 THE VIRGIN WITH SAINTS: an altar piece. See B. Berenson, 'Lorenzo Lotto,' 1895, pp. 161, 162

He assigns the picture to Lotto's “transition period,” and supposes it to have been painted about the year 1516 (see p. 159).

GIOVANNI DA CALCAR (1499-1546).

- 38 PORTRAIT OF A LADY. A half-length figure in a white dress, standing at the side of a table, her left hand resting on a spaniel; in the background an open door

Giovanni da Calcar, who was a pupil of Titian, chiefly worked at Venice and Naples. Most of his works have been ascribed to other artists. This picture was formerly ascribed to Paris Bordone, but is more probably by Calcar. The landscape in the background is quite in the manner of Titian.

Panel— $38\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 28 in.

GIROLAMO DA SANTA CROCE (PAINTED BETWEEN 1519 AND 1549).

- 67 THE VIRGIN AND CHILD, between St. Jerome and St. Francis.
The Infant Christ is seated in the lap of the Virgin, a three-quarter length figure; the two saints are half-length

The earliest known work of this Venetian painter has the date 1519. Not a few of them have been ascribed to more famous painters. A picture closely resembling this, only differing in the composition, is in the National Gallery, where it bears a different name.

It has been justly remarked that in his technique he surpasses many of his contemporaries.

Marc Antonio Barbaro was born at Venice in 1518; in 1559 he became Senator of the Venetian Republic; in 1561 he was sent Ambassador to the King of France; and from 1568 to 1574 he was Ambassador at Constantinople under the reign of Selim II.; in 1573 he became Procurator of San Marco. He died in 1595

Paladio built for him the beautiful villa near Treviso, now called Villa Masér, which Zelotto, in company with Paolo Veronese, decorated with fresco paintings.

The view in the background seems to commemorate the event of his leaving Venice as Ambassador to Constantinople.

A replica of this picture, now ascribed to Paolo Veronese, but evidently also by Zelotto, is in the Imperial Gallery at Vienna, No. 590. This replica has a view of the Bosphorus in the background, and is inscribed "Domino Mehemet Musulmanorum Imperatoris visirio amico n(ostro) optimo."

- 107 AN ALTAR PIECE, formerly in the Church of San Michele Bisdomini in Florence. Above the Virgin and at the sides two angel boys; St. Joseph is supporting the Infant Christ; St. James is standing on the right; St. Francis, the Infant St. John, and St. Jerome are in the foreground

Described by Vasari (VI. 258, Milanese's Italian edition):

"Receiving a commission subsequently from Francesco Pucci, if I remember rightly, for the altar piece of a chapel which Francesco had caused to be constructed in the Church of San Michele Bisdomini, which is situated on the Via de' Servi, having received this commission, I say, Pontormo conducted the work with so beautiful a manner, and colouring so animated, that it is almost impossible to believe it a mere painting. In this picture, our Lady, who is seated, presents the Divine Infant to St. Joseph, who regards the child with a smiling countenance, the animation and expression of which are astonishing. A child representing St. John the Baptist is equally beautiful, as are two other children who are upholding a pavilion of canopy. There is besides a figure of St. John the Evangelist in this work, a most beautiful old man, with one of St. Francis, kneeling, which is absolutely alive. His hands are folded, the fingers of the one intertwined with those of the other; he remains with his eyes and mind alike intent, contemplating the Virgin and Child, and does verily seem to breathe. Nor is the St. James beside him less beautiful, so that it is no marvel that this should be reputed the most admirable work ever executed by this extraordinary painter."

The above-described original has been replaced in the Church of San Michele by a copy painted on paper. The date of the removal of the original is not known, but it is probable that it took place early in the present century.

It is reported that Carlo Dolci's daughter Agnese executed several pictures in her father's studio. The present picture is one of the very few which can be authenticated as such. Many of them are, no doubt, nowadays ascribed to her father. The addition of his monogram on the picture seems to indicate that it was done under his directions and from his design.

RAPHAEL (ASCRIBED TO) (1483-1520).

- 135 PORTRAIT OF ANDREA NAVAGERO

It appears, from a letter addressed by Cardinal Bembo to Cardinal Bibbiena, that in 1516 Navagero had come to Rome from Venice with Beazzano, when their portraits were painted by Raphael. The Anonymous of Morelli says that they were painted on panel. On that ground the famous picture in the Doria Gallery at Rome, which is on canvas, has been proclaimed by Passavant, Dr. Bode and others to be a copy. The Navagero of the Doetsch collection being painted on panel, corresponds therefore with the statement of the Anonymous about the original picture.

The drawing and the engraving by Paolo Fidanza of Camerino (born in 1731)—No. 135 B—agree best in their size with Mr. Doetsch's picture.

It is very interesting to learn from the inscription on that engraving that about one hundred and fifty years ago this portrait was considered to represent the lawyer Bartolo of Sassoferrato, who was born in 1313, and who died at Perugia in 1359.

Andrea Navagero was born at Venice in 1483; he studied at Padova. Several Aldine editions of classics were prepared by him. After having been librarian to the Republic, he entered the diplomatic service. He died in 1529. See his biography in Cicogna 'Delle Iscr. Ven.,' vol. vi. p. 172-240.

RAPHAEL (ASCRIBED TO).

165 PORTRAIT OF LORENZO DE' MEDICI THE YOUNGER, Duke of Urbino

Vasari relates that Raphael painted the portrait of the Duke. The original appears to have been lost. The best known replica is in the Florence Gallery. The above-described one appears to have also been executed in Raphael's studio.

Lorenzo was the grandson of Lorenzo il Magnifico, and the father of Alessandro, the first Duke of Florence (see No. 156). He was born in 1492, and died in 1519. His uncle, Pope Leo X., had made him Duke of Urbino.

He died in 1509 at the age of fifty-three years, and from his appearance in this picture it becomes evident that it must have been painted towards the end of his reign.

This appears to be the most important painted portrait of that sovereign by the hand of a contemporary artist.

JAN VERMEYEN (1500-1559).

- 232 THE BATTLE OF PAVIA. The representation of this famous battle, in which Francis I. was made a prisoner, in 1525, agrees in its details with the authentic reports of the event. On the left, in the foreground, are the German soldiers, led by Frundsberg, the knights on horseback led by the Marquess of Pescara, and in front of them the Spanish arcabuseros, who attack the French inside the Park of Mirabella. The scene beyond, on the extreme left, represents the capture of the French King, when falling from his horse, being wounded by Count Von Salm. On the right the King is represented again, when led away, riding on a mule through the broken wall of the park. The fortified town of Pavia, with its canals, is seen in the distance.

Jan Vermeyen was the court painter of the Emperor Charles V., for whom he painted several large pictures of the campaign of his reign. The picture, which was formerly ascribed to Dürer, is described in 'Les Arts en Portugal,' par le Comte A. Raczyński, Paris, 1846, p 275, as being in the palace of Saldanha Castro Albuquerque Ribafria at Lisbon. It appears from a document published there that the picture has been in possession of that family for about three hundred years. A certified copy of the will referred to below was acquired by Mr. Doetsch when he bought the picture about ten years ago.

233 THE TRIUMPHAL PROCESSION OF THE EMPEROR MAXIMILIAN

In the year 1522 A. Dürer executed the large woodcut of the Triumphal Car, and in the same year the town hall of Nürnberg was decorated with a large painting reproducing the same design on a large scale. This very carefully executed replica on panel is evidently by the hand of a German artist. The background is here formed by a view of the City of Rome, which must have been prepared on the spot. It gives the picture an additional importance, because of the minute accuracy with which it represents the details. The following buildings call for special attention. On the left, St. Peter's in its unfinished state; to the right the Castello Sant Angelo, with the old bridge over the Tiber; beyond it the church of Trinità de' Monti and the Villa Medici on the Pincio; near it, on the left, S. Maria del Popolo; in the centre is the Pantheon, and above it the Quirinal, crowned by gardens (and no palace); further to the right is the old Capitol, and the highest point is reached by the gardens of the Esquilinus; next comes the Colosseum and the old palace of the Lateran.

This panoramic view is evidently taken from the Janiculus.
